Watch courses with your connections and colleagues

LinkedIn Learning is introducing new ways to experience community-based learning. Members can join learning groups, share and recommend courses to one another, and engage directly with Instructors through Q&A.

Now members can watch learning content with the LinkedIn Learning community by opting into the social panel. If their connections are watching content, they'll be notified and encouraged to join.

Learning requires persistence - you shouldn't have to do it alone

Key Features

- Dynamic viewing activity: Learners can opt-in to view others in the course, by sharing their own course viewing activity
- Social panel: Filter to find your connections or people from your organization.
- Notifications: Stay up-to-date with popular content being watched by people you know

Accessibility

- Available for web only
- Requires learners to have a connected profile. Only Profile Connection Required or Connection Optional accounts will see this feature.
- Admin Controls: This feature is on by default. However, learners must opt-in to view the social panel. As an admin, you can manage your organization's access to the social panel via toggle switch in Admin Account Settings, which allows you to turn off the social panel at the account level at any time.
